And it seems to me that in this direction lies our duty as an organization—that we make a specialty of this question and by discussion and recommendation endeavor to create a right public sentiment and turn the tide in the right direction. Our deserted farms and farmhouses demand it, our overcrowded manufacturing localities deserve it, and our daily as representatives of the agricultural and industrial interests of Maine remains undone if we fail to exert our influence for the right, and give forth no uncertain sound.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The Lewiston Journal understands the Androscoggin station, Maine Central road, was broken into Thursday afternoon, and about $119.00 taken. Fifty-four dollars of the amount was in dollar bills. The thief tore off the trimmings by the ticket window and took out the cash, thus effecting his entrance.

Cumberland

The Press says that a large dog sprang at a little school girl in Portland, Friday, and severely bit her. But for the assistance of Mr. Davis it is thought the child would have been killed.

The Telegraph is informed that the loss is about $2,000, by the explosion of gas at the Brunswick works, fully covered by insurance, and that it is expected in the course of two weeks to be able to make gas again.

BOWDOIN COLLEGE.—Wednesday night of last week an institution connected with Bowdoin College, known as the Temple, was blown up by the use of powder. The explosion occurred about midnight and the concussion broke glass in Maine Hall. The only portion of the block still standing is a dilapidated looking edifice, used by students which are the bane of society and which furnish the material for the dissolute classes of humanity.

We need this thing eventilated—this idea explained and fully brought before those classes whom it would benefit. Ministers of the Gospel need to preach it, newspapers to print and spread it abroad, and philanthropists and well wishers of the human race to uphold and recommend it to the people.

But to be practical. It is not an impossible or such a hard case for a young or middle aged man with a family to earn a farm and a home. Even suppose he is able so only buy and pay for the necessary tools and stock to start operations. Suppose a farm costs $1,000 and that sum will purchase quite a respectable farm—say of 100 acres partially inclined, some good tillage 25 acres or so, a little woodland and more pasturage. A little economy and determination will enable him to support his family and pay $100 per annum and interest on the mortgage, and in less than ten years the whole ten notes will be paid and the farm his own—and worth 50 per cent. more than when he purchased it if he is a true, real, worker.

How to do it? One method which I have seen successfully carried out is to sell off his wood by the lots. Nearly all our farms in Maine are naturally hay farms, and although I do not generally recommend selling of this crop yet here is a case which is an exception to the general rule. I have seen hays I would not sell except as far as the soil can be kept in as good or better condition while so doing. Ten tons of hay per annum might easily be spared from such a farm, and 500 tons quite a little stock. It is wonderful how a prudent management manages to secure fodder enough for his stock if no grants to earn money to pay his debts and it is earned, about it. And it is wonderful, too, how well managers manage to support families on the land, and to take the place of the hay thereof. There are so many acres of land which will produce a ton of hay to the acre, and cultivated lands of the same description will produce a ton and a half. Where a man possesses the above requisites, he can succeed in moving to his farm and commencing to improve it. Where there is a family to help, a little can be done in the winter season, and by degrees the improvements are made. Where there is no family to help, a little can be done in the winter season, and by degrees the improvements are made. Where there is no family to help, a little can be done in the winter season, and by degrees the improvements are made.

The Journal is informed that the Adjutant-General has received a communication from a committee on the part of the Philadelphia authorities on the Centenial asking for information as to the probable number of troops from Maine that will visit Philadelphia next year, at what date they will come, and if they will bring their own camp equipage.

Nearly all the looms and necessary machinery have been placed in position in the new Lockwood cotton mill in Waterville.

Lincoln.

There are fifteen "porgy factories" in the town of Bristol.

A shooting match came off in Damariscotta last week. Twenty-six men spent the day in the woods with the following result, in game. Two black ducks, eight partridges, two owls, three hawks, one pigeon, nineteen gray and sixty-nine red squirrels.

The amount of premiums and gratuities awarded by the several committees at the late Lincoln County Fair was $256 90, divided among the towns as follows: Waldoboro, $47.75; Newcastle, $27.50; Edgecomb, $47.75; Damariscotta, $12 75, Wiscasset, $6.75; Whitefield, $6.00; Bremen, $3 50, Boothbay, $1.00; Dresden, 25 cents

Messrs. Kenniston, Cobb & Co. of Boothbay have chartered two vessels at Portland to freight porgy chum from their works at Boothbay to Charleston, S. C.

The Oracle says the following is a record of the number of barrels of porgies caught this year by the vessels belonging to Church & Hathaway of Bristol up to August 20th: Steamer Jasmine, Boomer, 16,000; steamer J. Church, 14,982; steamer A. M. Hathaway, 15,413; steamer Osprey 10,267; steamer S. Brochers, 8,5284, schooner Dart, 8,364; schooner Antelope, 9,7464. Up to August 20th, 1874, the catch of the same vessels was as follows: J. Church, 12,080; A. M. Hathaway, 15,873 Osprey, 12,156; S. Brochers, 11,840; Dart 10,334; Antelope, 10,267. The steamer Jasmine is new, this being her first season, and is the largest vessel engaged in porgy catching. Since August 20th she has taken 1100 barrels, and the other vessels have done about the same relatively to their catch previous to that date. Church & Hathaway's factory is the largest on the coast.

Sagadahoc.

Scarlet fever and spoiling matches have prevailed of late in Woolwich.

Somerset.

The Reporter says that the Somerset Musical Association design to hold another convention in Skowhegan during the latter part of next month. The arrangements are being perfected.

A barn belonging to Danville L. Moore, of Moscow, containing twelve tons of hay was destroyed by fire on Wednesday the 8th inst. It is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

R. H. Marble of Harmony, has shipped during the past week, two car loads of cattle, and one of sheep, to Westbrook. Messrs. French of Madison, and Whittemore of Corinville, sent one car each of sheep, to Brighton.

The cars on the Somerset Railroad will run into the village of North Anson by Monday, the 22d inst. The track is laid to the bridge, and trains over the Kennebec river will be completed by the day above named.

The Skowhegan Reporter says the snow is fitted to the road between that village and Parkmanville that teams were obliged to leave the highway and go in the fields.

Hon. S. W. Hathaway and family of Skowhegan, will spend the winter in Augusta.

The Journal says that the Democratic city government has been somewhat lavish in the expenditure of money in fitting up the Common Council room

Waldo.

The Journal says that at the court in Belfast recently, Judge Libbey sentenced Martin E. Tower to twenty-five years in the State Prison for the crime of rape. This fact was communicated to the prisoner's mother, who was struck with astonishment as to the magnitude of the sentence. "What did they do that for?" she exclaimed. "Twenty-five years! why as 'tain't be contented there three weeks?"

A NEW CEREAL. A new cereal has been grown in the State of Oregon and thus far no one has been able to classify it, for while it bears a general resemblance to wheat, yet its stalk, made of growth and heavy filaments cause it to be taken for rye or barley by the most experienced farmers. It is presenting it to a dozen agriculturists not to be in session will agree as to what sort of grain it is, whether to belong to the family of either wheat rye or barley. It was discovered in this wise. A farmer living in Tillamook county, Oregon, while out hunting about four years ago killed several Wild geese. On opening one he noticed a peculiar grain in its stomach. Its form puzzled him, but deciding to know what it really was, he planted it in the spring and raised a bounteous crop from it, and subsequently hasted forty bushels on a half acre of land. It has a most striking appearance in the field owing to its dense character its long heavily bearded filaments, and drooping head. Its mode of growth is also different from any grain with which I am acquainted, for from ten to ten stalks spring from one root, and attain a light, white ripe, of four and a half to five feet. They are very thin compact of a bright straw color and extremely hard, so that it contained a large quantity of silex.

DEATH OF VICE-PRESIDENT WILSON.

Hon. Henry Wilson, Vice-President of the United States, died suddenly in Washington, about half past seven o'clock on Monday morning. Such is the fateful import of the telegram which was yesterday flashed from the National Capital to every part of the country, and notwithstanding the public knowledge of Mr. Wilson's illness, the recent encouraging reports of his convalescence, rendered the sudden announcement of his decease unexpected and startling in its abruptness. The dangerous paralytic attack by which he was prostrated on the 3d inst. caused a general alarm as to his condition, but the daily reports since that time have been constantly reassuring announcing a steady improvement, and the last despatch on Sunday night reported his intention to ride out on Monday. In conversation he expressed his own belief that the crisis of his paralytic affection had passed and that he should continue to steadily improve. He rested comfortably Sunday night, awoke refreshed and bright about 7 o'clock Monday morning, and half an hour later, after taking a prescribed draught, sank back and expired instantaneously and without a struggle. So sudden was the stroke of the grim messenger, Death that the attendants by the bed-side were for some time unable to realize the fact that Henry Wilson had ended his mortal career. The sad intelligence was at once telegraphed throughout the country, and the half-masting of the Stars and Stripes the adjournment of Courts and general expressions of sorrow in every part of the Nation, bore testimony to the profound sorrow of the American people at the death of that eminent statesman and philanthropist the Vice-President of the United States. An adequate sketch of the career of one who has borne so prominent a part in the events of our National history for more than thirty years, would prove beyond the limit of our columns, and we therefore give some of the more salient points in his biography, which will prove of especial interest at this time.

Henry Wilson was born in Farmington N. H. Feb 16 1812, and his age was 63 years 9 months and 6 days at the time of his death. His parents were poor, and at the age of 10 years he was apprenticed to a neighboring farmer for whom he labored eleven years, during which his school privileges did not cover in the aggregate a term exceeding one year. He evinced a strong taste for reading, however, especially in history and biography, and contrived during his apprenticeship to read nearly one thousand volumes, borrowed from a neighboring private library, and industriously perused in the evenings by the firelight. On coming of age he left Farmington, with all his earthly possessions strapped upon his back, and walked to Natick, Mass where he hired out to a shoemaker and learned the trade. He remained three years and then returned to New Hampshire to secure an education, but the insolvency of the man to whom he had entrusted his money, compelled him to abandon his purpose and he resumed working at his trade in Natick in 1838, then 26 years of age. His youth and early manhood had thus been devoted to unremitting labor, and it was in allusion to this fact that when in 1858 he replied in Congress to the famous 'mud-sill' speech of Gov Hammond of South Carolina, he uttered these eloquent words

"Sir, I am the son of a hireling manual laborer who with the frosts of seventy winters on his brow, lives by daily labor" I too have lived by daily labor. I, too, have been a 'hireling manual laborer' Poverty cast its dark and chilling shadow over the home of my childhood, and want was sometimes there—an unbidden guest. At the age of ten years—to aid him who gave me being in keeping the gaunt spectre from the hearth of the mother who bore me—I left the home of my boyhood, and went forth to earn my bread by 'daily labor.'"

The disappointment of his hopes of obtaining a school education only whetted his desire for knowledge and he continued to devote all his spare time to the work of self instruction, preserving habits of the utmost industry frugality and temperance, and devoting a portion of his earnings to the purchase of books instead of squandering them upon unprofitable recreations. The history of this portion of his life affords a most worthy example to the youth of the country, and to those struggling with poverty it furnishes proof that the highest honors may be attained by perseverance self-denial and judicious employment of every opportunity. The development of the traits alluded to could not fail in due time to achieve a recognition and in 1840 we find the 'Natick Cobbler' commencing a political career which has been interwoven with the most eventful years of our country's history, rendering his name a household word and culminating in his election to next to the highest office in the gift of the American People.

During the 1840 campaign he made more than sixty speeches for Harrison and made so favorable impression that he was elected to the Massachusetts Legislature from Natick serving with continued success in the sessions of 1841, 1842, 1844, 1845, 1846, 1850, 1851 and 1852, presiding over the Senate for the last two years. He was early imbued with the spirit of hostility to Slavery and speedily became recognized as one of the most earnest and zealous champions of equal rights for all. In 1845 he was selected, with the poet, John G. Whittier, to bear to Washington the great anti-Slavery petition from Massachusetts against the admission of Texas as a State. In 1848 he was a delegate to the Whig National Convention, but on the rejection by that body of the anti-Slavery resolutions presented, withdrew and at once assumed a prominent part in organizing the Free Soil party. In 1849 he was Chairman of the Free Soil Committee of Massachusetts, and after his service of two years in the State Senate was chosen President of the Free Soil National Convention at Pittsburg in 1852, and elected a member of the National Committee. In the same year he ran as a Free Soil candidate for Congress, and in 1853 and 1854 was an unsuccessful candidate for Governor of Massachusetts. About this time he was somewhat attracted by the "American" party which made its appearance in 1855, he believing that it might be instrumental in the work of overthrowing Slavery, but his expectations were not realized and he turned his attention to the more promising movement for the foundation of the Republican Party, in which he at once became one of the leaders.

Henry Wilson's public career as a Republican began in 1855, when he was elected to the United States Senate from Massachusetts, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Hon. Edward Everett. In the great struggle between the arrogant pretensions of the Slave power and the sturdy minority which opposed its encroachments—a struggle which overshadowed all other interests in Congress from the date of Mr. Wilson's accession until the breaking out of rebellion—he showed himself an unflinching champion of the right and displayed an ability in advocating the cause of freedom, which won the esteem of his colleagues and constituents. It was during this period that he made the eloquent speech in vindication of the dignity of honest toil in reply to the insulting harangue of the slave-holding South Carolinian. He was no less outspoken in his denunciation of the ruffianly attack of Brooks upon Senator Sumner which he characterized in the Senate as as a "brutal, murderous and cowardly assault." For this speech Brooks challenged him to fight a duel, which Mr. Wilson declined on the ground that duelling was a barbarous practice branded by the laws of the country as a crime, but declaring that he believed in the right of self-defence in its broadest interpretation. The attempt to stifle free speech in Congress by the flourishing of duelling pistols proved a failure. In all the exciting controversies over the extension of Slavery during Buchanan's Administration Mr. Wilson bore a prominent part, standing staunchly by the side of Senator Sumner in behalf of the principles of freedom.

At the breaking out of the Rebellion Mr Wilson, who had been for many years an active member of the Massachusetts militia, exerted himself with great activity in promoting the enlistment of troops to support the National Government, personally organizing a regiment which he accompanied to the front as its Colonel. After joining the Army of the Potomac he was made a member of Gen. McClellan's staff on which he served until the assembling of Congress Of his services as Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs throughout the war, it is unnecessary to speak in detail, as its labors are indissolubly connected with the military history of the great conflict He was undefatigable in his efforts to promote the efficiency of the Union armies, and the records of Congress bear honorable testimony of the unflagging zeal with which he conducted the vast amount of legislation required for recruiting, organizing and equipping troops. The most cordial tributes to his patriotic and efficient services in that important position have been paid by all the Secretaries of War and the most eminent commanding Generals of the Union forces. During all this time he kept constantly in view the great principles which he had so long advocated, introducing and successfully advocating the passage of the bills abolishing Slavery in the District of Columbia and for the employment of colored soldiers in the war against rebellion From 1865 to 1871 he was also chairman of the Committee on Pensions and a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

During his Senatorial career he had published a work entitled 'Anti-Slavery Measures in Congress' and a "History of the Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth Congress and measures for the prosecution of the War for the Union." At the close of the war he applied himself to the task of writing a valuable history of 'The Rise and Fall of the Slave Power in America," upon which he labored so steadily as to seriously impair his health. In the midst of this literary labor he was nominated as the Republican candidate for Vice-President in 1872, and during the campaign which resulted in his election, he was engaged almost constantly for four months in delivering addresses in different parts of the country The severe strain of these efforts upon a constitution impaired by arduous labors in the Senate and subsequent literary application, made itself apparent in failing health shortly after his election and since that time he has suffered frequent periods of prostration. The state of his health has prevented him from presiding in the Senate except at intervals and during the last Spring he made an extended tour in the South, which seemed to have a beneficial effect Latterly he had resumed work upon the third volume of his book which he wished to complete as the crowning labor of his life, two volumes of about 700 pages each having already appeared, bringing the history to the date of President Lincoln's first election The concluding volume was in an advanced stage of preparation, and the materials collected will enable his literary executors to carry out his wish for the completion of a work which will prove of great interest and value to the students of American History.

During the past year or two Mr. Wilson has been more or less prominently mentioned in connection with the Republican candidacy for President, and while the feeble condition of his health would doubtless of itself have prevented his selection, it is possible that he may have indulged in some ambitious hopes of such preferment He has been very earnest in his efforts to promote the complete restoration of harmony in the Republican party, and has urged in public speeches and through the press that a policy of conciliation be adopted to win back all those who have become politically estranged. He presided at the last Republican State Convention in Massachusetts and made an eloquent plea for the future usefulness of the great party with which his public career has been identified He will be remembered as a devoted leader in the grand struggle with the spirit of caste which resulted in embodying the noble sentiments of the Declaration of Independence in the organic law of the Republic and lived to witness the preparations for celebrating the Centennial Anniversary of a Nation having "Equal and Exact justice to All Men" emblazoned upon its banner. He has furnished a distinguished example of a self-made man, triumphing over the most serious obstacles, and by industry, energy and devotion to just principles attaining to the highest public honors.

Mr. Wilson was married in 1840 to Harriet M. Howe, of Natick, a beautiful and estimable lady, who early lost her health and who died in 1870 after a painful illness of several years. Their only child, Hamilton Wilson, died in Texas in 1866, aged 20 years, while serving as an officer in the U. S. army.

The duties of the Vice-Presidency will devolve upon Hon. Thomas W. Ferry, of Michigan, who was chosen at the last session as President pro tempore of the United States Senate.

DEATH OF HON. O. S. FERRY.

The telegraph has already announced the death at his home in Norwalk, on Sunday afternoon, of Hon. Oliver S. Ferry, United States Senator from Connecticut. Mr. Ferry had been declining for several years with an affection of the spinal marrow, and with difficulty remained at his post during the last session of Congress. He bore his sufferings with the utmost heroism and submitted without murmuring to the most painful treatment for his disease. He was born in Bethel, Conn., Aug. 15, 1824, and graduated at Yale in 1844, afterwards practicing at the Bar, serving as Probate Judge, as member of the State Senate and as County Attorney, until elected to Congress in 185[illegible]. He served with distinction as Colonel and Brigadier General of volunteers during the war and in 1866 was chosen to the U. S. Senate to succeed Hon. L. S. Foster. He was re-elected in 1872 and his term would have expired in 1879. In the Senate he was an influential member, having a well-balanced mind and a lucid style of argument, and personally he was much esteemed. He leaves a wife and one daughter.

The New York Sun, a good Democratic authority, analyses the last New York election returns and shows that applying the same degree of political change in every State in the Union, it will just about wipe out the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives; and if the States were to cast their electoral votes for President according to the same rule, it would give to the Republican candidate a majority.

STATE PENSIONS. The number of applications which have been received at the Adjutant General's office so far during the present year, for pensions from the State, is 714. Of this number 256 are from invalids, 278 from widows, 143 from dependent mothers, 11 from dependent fathers, 2 from dependent sisters, and 24 from guardians of orphan children and adults. Of the 714 pension claims received this year, 571 have been allowed, and the balance, 143, have not yet been allowed. The total amount allowed now is $20,963.55. The appropriation made by the Legislature for the present year was $25,000. From present indications it is thought the whole amount allowed, at the end of the year, will not exceed the sum of $22,000.

The action of Chief Justice Waite in discharging Brigham Young from the alleged contempt of disobedience to the order of Judge McKean requiring him to pay alimony to Ann Eliza is satisfactory to the Government. It is the opinion of the Attorney General that the woman in question in marrying Brigham Young violated the United States statutes, and therefore could not avail herself of her own wrong.

MISSISSIPPI.

If the Republican press had charged that Alabamians crossed over to help the Mississippi Democracy at their last election, it would have been pronounced a Republican slander, but we read the following in the Columbus (Miss.) Weekly Index.

"We return thanks to our Alabama friends who came to our assistance when they heard that our lives and homes were in danger. The self-restraint they imposed was as commendable as their promptness in coming Like good soldiers as they were, they reported to the city authorities and remained quietly in their quarters until their services should be needed. These brave Alabamians remembered that Walthall's and Sharp's Mississippians and Deas and Manigault's Alabamians had fought side by side during four years of war, and they would not remain in security while their former comrades were in peril.

The Mississippi Democracy have issued a congratulatory address breathing some very magnanimous sentiments, whereupon the Cincinnati Gazette says:

"It is time for a little magnanimity. Having driven from the polls, browbeaten, or murdered all their dark-skinned opponents, the Mississippi Democrats have the field to themselves Order reigns in Warsaw The returns from Yazoo county are significant in this connection The county gave Grant 1511 majority in 1872, while at the late election only seven votes were cast for the Republican candidate for State Treasurer, his Democratic opponent receiving 4044. The Republican candidates for Congress and District Attorney received only three votes each. A marvellous change that in three years!"

SECRETARY CHANDLER.

It seems that some of the newspapers have concluded after all that indiscriminate aspersion is not the most justifiable greeting to a new Cabinet officer, and we now find the N Y Herald speaking in the following commendatory manner of "Secretary Chandler's Business Habits":

It begins to look to many people here as though the President had made a hit when he made Chandler Secretary of the Interior. He is clearing out a good many dusty corners, and though an outcry is made that he is removing clerks and others for political causes he asserts positively that not a single removal has been made by him or is contemplated on personal or political grounds He also authorizes a sweeping and explicit denial of the widely published assertions that he has made, or is making removals for failures to contribute to campaign funds. There is a story current here that a friend of a person removed called on Mr Chandler and indignantly protested against the change on the ground that he had dismissed a very competent clerk; Mr. Chandler is reported to have answered:—He is a thoroughly competent clerk, and he is removed for cause, and if he wants the cause made public I will do it."

Mr Chandler is looking carefully into all the bureaus of the Interior department, and the means to take them up one after the other and make clean work of incompetency and maladministration. He is not in haste and means to make no mistake; but he means, it is said, to shelter no one, nor to be intimidated by any one's political friends. It is common talk among his friends that he has found many unlovely spots in the department, and that there will be many and important changes in the next few weeks. There is no doubt that he means to clean the Indian Bureau and all its belongings when he gets ready, and that there will be a revolution in that part of the government service such as will please Professor Marsh and Mr. Welsh. There are people here who say that Mr. Chandler has undertaken a large contract.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

The proposed statue of Horace Greeley at New York is a failure, it being found impossible to raise a sum sufficient to erect it. Those who did subscribe have had their money returned to them.

Says one Liberal Republican now in the Democratic fold to another of the same sort: "We must wake up the party and appeal to the people as we used to do in the days of the Free Soil party." "Ah!" replied the other, "but we had the conscience of the people to appeal to then."—[Boston Herald.

Paul Morphy, the once noted chess-player, has become hopelessly insane, and is now in an asylum in Louisiana. He has lived a very secluded life for several years.

In his letter notifying Gov. Groome that he contests the election of Charles J. M. Gwen as attorney-General of Maryland, Mr. Wallis says: "I respectfully insist that the election in the city of Baltimore was rendered wholly void by fraud, intimidation and violence, and that the returns of the city cannot lawfully be counted."

Carl Schurz authorizes the statement that he had no previous knowledge of the editorial article in the Westliche Post, which directly charged that General Babcock was connected with the St. Louis Whiskey Ring.

To the World's remarks that it will be left to a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress to take the first real step in the direction of specie payments the Cincinnati Enquirer replies: "We are sorry for this, for it postpones the election of a Democratic President."

It is reported that Secretary Chandler insists that Chief Clerk Grinnell, of the Patent Office, was removed "for cause," and that ex-Commissioner Leggett has recently said that, had he known what hardships the letter to Grinnell [illegible] Secretary Chandler the trouble of [illegible] the removal."

THE SPEAKERSHIP. The New York Tribune calls for a little timely Democratic explanation, as follows:

"But it does occur to us, in view of the fact that Mr. Randall of Pennsylvania, the most prominent candidate for the Speakership, participated a short time ago in the deliberations of a Convention of his party which adopted an inflation platform and never protested against the performance, that a little statement, distinct and explicit, of what he does believe in, and to what extent, would not be out of place or be uninteresting reading. Nor does it seem unreasonable to suggest that Mr. Kerr of Indiana might appropriately explain whether he is as much in favor of inflation now as he appeared to be in a noteworthy speech of his delivered in the House in 1870, and whether he is or is not now in favor of measures for an early return to specie. Indeed, it is not too much to say that a distinct declaration upon this subject formally made by the party at the first opportunity, say upon the assembling of the Congressional caucus for the nomination of a candidate for Speaker, would be looked upon by the general public as a very timely and proper proceeding."

THE BRITISH LUMBER TRADE. The Portland Press states that private advices received at Ottawa from England by last mail bring the gratifying intelligence to the manufacturers of deal timber that stocks are said not to be half the amount as at this season last year, and the largest dealers in building timber in London have advanced their prices from $90 to $125. This is good news and cannot fail to have an inspiring effect on the lumber market here and other places in Maine.

An Iron Clad Almost Wrecked by Carelessness.

LONDON, Nov. 22. A London special says the iron-clad ship Iron Duke was nearly lost Saturday, off Plymouth, while on a trial trip. By some unknown means her main sluice had been left open and the water rushed into the vessel, covering in a quarter of an hour the stoke hole and the lower parts of the engines and gained on the pumps momentarily. The signal of distress was displayed and several tugs from the dock yards, three miles off, started to her assistance, but the sluice was closed by the artificer of the ship before they arrived. A few moments later and she would have been sunk. When the water was at its highest point the Iron Duke began to heel precisely as the Vanguard did when sinking from the collision a short time ago.

The First Report—Died Suddenly at 4.30 A. M.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. Vice President Wilson is dead.

9.30 A. M. Vice President Wilson died very suddenly at 7.30 this morning. He rested well last night, awoke at 7 A. M. and expressed himself as feeling bright and better, sat up in bed to take his medicine, laid down on his left side and expired in a few moments, without a struggle.

Special Meeting of the Cabinet Called.

The President was notified of the Vice President's death about 9 o'clock, and immediately called a special meeting of the Cabinet at 10.30 A. M., at which time all the members were present except Secretary Robeson, who is absent from the city. Secretary Fish was requested to attend the meeting of Senators now in the city, at noon, on the part of the President and Cabinet and unite in any arrangements for the funeral ceremony. After the programme for the funeral shall have been perfected by the meeting the President will be notified by the Secretary of State and an Executive order will be issued announcing the death of the Vice President, ordering the Department to be closed, and other suitable marks of respect be shown to the memory of the deceased.

The Feeling of Sadness on Learning of the Vice-President's Death.

It having been represented last night that the Vice-President had so much improved that he would be able to leave the city for the North this week, the intelligence of his sudden death this forenoon fell with startling force and sadness on the community. The Vice-President seemed on Saturday to be a great deal better than at any time during his late sickness, but yesterday he was not quite so well.

His Condition Sunday.

Postmaster Burt, of Boston, called in the morning and had a pleasant conversation with him. Mr. Crossman, of New York, a literary friend, also visited him on business concerning the unfinished volume of the Vice-President's work on Slavery. The Vice-President then slept from 1 till 3 o'clock, when he rose. Mr. Crossman returned at 3 o'clock at the Vice-President's request and remained until evening.

During the Night.

The Vice-President went to bed at an early hour and slept tolerably well during the night. In his waking intervals he asked for water. About midnight he got up and walked around the room, then going to the table took up a little book of poems entitled "The Changed Cross," with the motto "Not as I will, but as Thou Wilt," and read several verses from it. This volume belonged to his wife and contained a photograph of her and their son, both deceased. He treasured it beyond value and always made it his companion from which he seemed to derive much comfort. After reading the verses he spoke with gratitude of the kindness of his friends during his sickness and of the wide-spread sympathy in his behalf. He then returned to bed in a happy mood and slept.

During the Morning Hours.

At 1 o'clock this morning he awoke complaining of a pain in his stomach. One of the attendants rubbed it when being relieved, he again fell asleep and at 7 o'clock he awoke remarking that he felt bright and better than at any time previously. He said that he was going to ride out to-day and to his physician, Dr. Baxter, advised him to do so if the weather was fair.

The Last Moments.

At twenty minutes past seven o'clock, he said he would get up and take breakfast. He then called for bitter water which had heretofore been prescribed, and having drank it, he laid with his left side on the pillow as if with sudden exhaustion, breathing heavily, but uttering no words, and in a few minutes died without a struggle.

The Body.

has been laid out in the Vice-President's room. The friends of the deceased in Massachusetts have been advised of the solemn event. The following are obtained from Messrs. S. A. Boyden and F. A. Wood, who were alternately the Vice-President's attendants throughout the night. Boyden is a Lieutenant of the Capitol police, who was selected by Mr. Wilson to be with him as much as possible on account of their old friendship formed a number of years ago in Natick, Mass. Yesterday evening the Vice-President said "if the Doctor was here I'd have a blister put on the back of my neck instead of this plaster." Mr. Wood replied that he could manage that without the Doctor, to which Mr. Wilson rejoined, "Yes, but I don't want to take the responsibility." His attendant then asked if he wouldn't like to have a message sent to the Doctor, but he said after thinking a moment, "It isn't worth while."

Additional Details

Communicating the News of Ferry's Death.

A few moments after Mr. Wilson awoke. At 7 o'clock this morning, while Mr. Boyden was in attendance, Mr. Wood entered and was privately consulted by Mr. Boyden as to the advisability of communicating to the Vice-President the news of Senator Ferry's death, and concluded it would be best to mention it as Mr. Wilson would be certain to read it in the newspapers. The Vice-President was prepared for the announcement, and expressed no surprise, but said: "Poor Ferry; he has been a great sufferer." He then proceeded to speak of Senator Ferry's political services in terms of high commendation, characterizing him as an able, active and useful man.

He Talked about Mr. Ferry's early life and about his last election, and added "that makes 59 dead with whom I have sat in this Senate—what a record! I don't think any man now living can say the same, unless, perhaps, it is Hamlin of Maine. If I live to the end of my present term, I shall be the sixth in the history of the country who have served so long a time." His death coming but in a few minutes, after all the evidences of remarkable improvement and rapid recovery, could not at first be realized by his attendants, and it was not till the arrival of Dr. C. M. Ford, who resides in the neighborhood and was instantly sent for, that the melancholy fact found any credence.

The President's Order Announcing the Death of Vice-President Wilson.

The following order announcing the death of Vice-President Wilson was issued by the President this afternoon:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, Nov. 22, 1875. It is with profound sorrow that the President has to announce to the people of the United States the death of the Vice-President, Henry Wilson, who died in the Capitol of the Nation this morning. [illegible]

[illegible] mourning for 30 days. The Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy will issue orders that appropriate military and naval honors be rendered to the memory of one whose virtues and services will be borne in recollection by a grateful nation.

U. S. GRANT.

By the President,
HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

The Supreme Court Adjourns.

When the Supreme Court assembled to-day at noon, the Chief Justice announced that in consequence of the death of the Vice-President, no business would be transacted to-day, and thereupon the court adjourned till to-morrow. All the Justices then proceeded to the Senate wing of the Capitol to participate in the meeting of Senators to make arrangements for the funeral. The court will transact no business this week, owing to the interruption caused by the death of the Vice-President and the observance of Thanksgiving day.

Senators Present.

Among those already assembled in the ladies' reception room, were Senators Thurman, Sargent, Windom, Edmunds, Morrill, of Vt., Ingalls, Paddock, Patterson, Dennis, Jones, of Fla., McDonald and Sherman, also Secretary Fish, Postmaster-General Jewell, Attorney-General Pierrepont, ex-Attorney-General Williams and various personal friends of the Vice-President. On motion of Senator Sherman Chief Justice Waite was selected as Chairman of the meeting.

The Post Mortem Examination.

November 22—11.30 A. M. Four hours after death; thermometer 68°; external appearances nothing unusual; brain weight 49 ounces, sinews of brain full of black fluid blood, deposits of lymph on the surface of cerebral hemispheres of brain; normal cyst the size of a pea in each choroid plexus; atheromatous deposit in the arteries at the base of spinal cord; nothing abnormal in color or consistence. A microscopic examination will be made of the lungs,—Old pleuritic adhesion on the left side; calcareous deposit the size of a pea in the middle lobe of the right lung; lungs congested, hypostatic. Heart normal, except small calcareous deposit in the aortic valve; pericardial fluid normal. Stomach empty, congested throughout with slight erosion or abrasions at several parts; pyloric portions normal. Liver congested and somewhat fatty; small cyst on upper surface of gall bladder, full of bile, normal. Kidneys—weight 8 ounces each, congested with one or two small cysts or cicatrices of similar cyst. Spleen large, dark, otherwise normal. Other viscera normal.

The Cause of his Death was apoplexy. The following named physicians made the post mortem examination: Surgeon-General Barnes, Drs. Baxter, Ford, Magruder, Ashford and Lamb. The funeral of the late Vice-President will probably take place Wednesday.

The Reception of the News in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov 22. The unexpected announcement of Vice President Wilson's death this morning was regarded at first with distrust, but the early reports being confirmed the news created a universal sense of sadness throughout the country, especially in the State in which he resided, where he was best known and therefore most highly honored. A meeting of the State Council was summoned to take suitable action, and it was decided that Messrs. Dennis and Turner of the Council should go to Washington this afternoon, and two members of the Governor's personal staff follow in the evening. Flags were displayed at half mast and some of Mr. Wilson's friends started for Boston.

In Fall River.

A large meeting of the people of Fall River was held there at noon to-day and resolutions eulogizing the late Vice President were adopted, and speeches were made by prominent citizens. The Methodist preachers of this city adopted similar resolutions.

In New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. The fact of the death of Vice-President Wilson becoming generally known, there is a universal expression of sorrow. Postmaster James and Collector Arthur have half masted the flags over the Post-office and Custom House. The flags over the Hotels are also half masted and several vessels in the harbor display the same sign of respect for the deceased.

On motion of Henry H. Anderson seconded by Amasa Redfield the Supreme Court Chambers was adjourned by Judge Donohue this morning, owing to the intelligence received of the death of Vice-President Wilson. In the Court of Oyer and Terminer where the retrial of Scannell for murder is going on District Attorney Phelps spoke of the eminent character of the deceased statesman, and said that under ordinary circumstances with any ordinary trial on the court would no doubt be adjourned as a tribute of respect to Mr. Wilson's memory, but considering the circumstances of the case and the length of time it had taken and was likely to take he thought the course of justice should not be delayed and that the trial should proceed. It would be Mr. Wilson's wish if he could be consulted. In conclusion he requested that the Court enter on the records a minute of its sense of loss sustained. Judge Barrett granted the motion, eulogized the deceased and said no doubt all he would desire would be the expression of its esteem and respect by the court and that it would satisfy his relatives and friends.

In the United States District Court, Judge Blatchford presiding this morning, Wm. M. Evarts made a motion that the court adjourn for one week as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Vice-President Wilson. Motion was seconded by District Attorney Smith who spoke briefly in eulogy of the deceased. Judge Blatchford said the motion was a proper one to be made and ordered the court to stand adjourned until Saturday next. All the State courts except two in which public interest requires that the trials proceed have adjourned out of respect to the late Vice-President.

In the United States Circuit Court this morning U. S. District Attorney Geo Bliss moved an adjournment and pronounced a brief eulogy upon Vice-President Wilson. The motion was seconded by ex-Judge Emmott, and Judge Johnson, presiding, granted the motion and adjourned the court. The city is nearly covered with flags at half mast. All the business houses and a large number of private dwellings are displaying this token of mourning for the Vice-President. No action has yet been taken by any public bodies here except the courts.

The Board of Aldermen this afternoon adopted suitable resolutions on the death of Vice-President Wilson.

In Providence.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 22. The news of the death of the Vice-President creates a profound sensation of sadness and regret in this city, and private flags were immediately displayed at half-mast.

In Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22. A special meeting of the City Council was held this morning to take action in regard to building the new bridge over the Schuylkill river at Market street. While the meeting was in progress the death of the Vice-President was announced, and appropriate resolutions were passed. Also a resolution granting the use of Independence Hall for the reception of his body on its way to Massachusetts.

In Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 22. The announcement of the sudden death of the Vice-President was a shock to the community. The flags on City Hall, Government buildings and a number of business houses including the offices of the daily papers and the shipping are at half mast.

Military Honors.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. In compliance with the orders of the President directing that appropriate military and naval honors be rendered to the memory of the late Vice President Wilson, the following order was issued by the Secretary of War this afternoon:

On the day succeeding the receipt of this order at each military post, the troops will be paraded at 10 A. M. and the order read to them. The national flag will be displayed at half mast, and at dawn of day 13 guns will be fired [illegible]

[illegible] regiment by Vice President Wilson, and the reception and hospitality of the city of Boston on the occasion of the visit of the Fifth to that city last June, it was decided to tender the full regiment as an escort to the remains of the Vice President from Washington to Boston or to the place of burial.

The Remains as They Lie in the Vice-President's Room.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. The embalmed remains of Mr. Wilson have been laid in the Vice-President's room on a catafalque which occupies the place where the writing table stood at which he did all his work. The body is attired in a dress suit of black cloth and beside it are a wreath of tea Roses, Japanicas, Calla Lillies. White Pinks and Heliotropes from the wife of the President and a cross of white flowers from Gen. Babcock.

The room is guarded by a detail of Capitol police and among them is a colored man who also stood by the bier of Senator Sumner.

The Date for the Funeral is not yet settled. It is the desire of some of his friends to defer it until Congress assembles, but the question will probably be determined by his nephew and executor, W. L. Coledge, of Natick, who is yet to be heard from on the subject. President Grant called at the Capitol this afternoon, but as the progress of embalming was in progress, he returned without seeing the remains.

LUMBERING OPERATIONS. A correspondent from Greenville writes that notwithstanding the general impression of lumber merchants and operators in the early part of the season, that a comparatively small amount of lumber would be cut the coming winter, nearly as many supplies have been stored at Greenville as in former years; most of which have been conveyed by steamers to the most convenient point about the Lake for the consumers. The Lake is now frozen a distance of three miles from Greenville; and if the cold weather continues the steamers will be obliged to discontinue their trips this week.

A NEW TOWN HALL. James Emery, Esq., one of the wide-awake and enterprising citizens of Bucksport, has purchased the old "Parker block," and the lot north of it with the "George Herbert building," and began yesterday the initiatory work of preparing a new town hall suitable to the wants of that live village. In the rear part of the building arrangements will be made for the accommodation of the Fire Department. The hall will be spacious and will have well arranged ante-rooms and other accompaniments such as will make it an ornament to the place and capable of containing as large an audience as will be likely at any time to enter it. There is no prettier village on the Penobscot than Bucksport and its enterprising people are awake to the value of all improvements which will tend to make it more attractive.

CORONERS' INQUEST. The coroner's inquest which was begun Saturday in relation to the E. & N. A. Railway accident, met again yesterday afternoon, and examined one witness, Gilbert Cole, the man who saw Capt. Roberts when he was struck by the train. He stated that he was walking towards Dole & Fogg's mill on the side track—the same on which the train was running—and was nearly opposite to the Maine Central depot. He saw the train and heard the bell. He noticed Capt. Roberts walking alongside of the track, and when he looked up again, saw him step on the track about a rod ahead of the train. He did not seem to be conscious of his nearness to the moving train, and was walking along in an apparently thoughtful mood. He had gone but a few steps when the car struck him in the back and threw him on to his face. The next time he saw him, Capt. Roberts was lying directly across the track, with head and shoulders outside. He could not tell whether he turned around in attempting to extricate himself, or whether the car turned him round. Mr. Cole states he was so much overcome at the sight that he shouted and ran behind a car.

No other witnesses were examined. The jury, after giving the subject careful consideration, rendered a verdict to the effect that Capt. Roberts' death was accidental, and attach no blame to the employes of the E. & N. A. Railway.

On sunny slopes, ah! long the lady
Feedeth her flock at noon
She leads it down to drink at eve
Where the small rivulets croon,
All night her locks are wet with dew,
Her eyes outwatch the moon.

Beyond the hills her voice is heard,
She sings when light doth wane
"My longing heart is full of love,
Nor shall my watch be vain.
My shepherd lord, I see him not,
But he will come again."

MR. GILBERT ON FRUIT CULTURE.

At the recent session of the Board of Agriculture in Calais, in accordance with an invitation previously extended to the audience, to hand to the desk on slips of paper any question of fruit culture they would like to have answered—many persons availed themselves of the privilege, and when Mr. Gilbert commenced his talk, numerous texts had been sent to the stand from those interested in the subject. In commencing he spoke briefly of the importance of fruit culture to Maine, and its adaptability to Washington county; and said every county in the State might produce sufficient fruit for its own wants, and he knew of no climatic conditions to prevent it. The consumption of fruit is increasing, and those who grow it for family and market uses are aiming to produce a succession of fruit for all seasons of the year. Everybody loves fruit, we never get tired of apple pies, apple sauce or raw apples as dessert and in every household where it can be afforded fruit should be found on the tables every day:—it is both healthy and profitable. Some years ago it was thought we could not grow pears in Maine, but experience has proved that we may grow good pears in this state, and this fact, like many others must be learned by experience. Apple trees like a good strong highland soil—what is called a hard wood growth being the best—which must be well drained naturally or artificially; no standing water must be allowed about the roots of trees. As a general thing clay loam is not favorable for apple trees, although some sorts seems to do well on such soils. In setting an orchard, trees should not be crowded into to small a compass, thirty-three feet apart being about the right distance. If this should seem too far, and a waste of land, set between four trees planted at the above distances, a tree of dwarfish habits. Trees need feeding. In this State we have seen too many evidences of starving orchards, and this should ever be avoided. Give such a growth to the tree as will be sure to ripen the growth of wood made each season. Of course the nearer trees are set in an orchard the more they must be fed. Mulching was recommended, and it was advised to keep down all vegetable growth, and to keep the land light and free from weeds or grass. It makes but little difference at what time of the year it is applied—but when put on it must extend out from the trunk of the tree to beyond the extremities of the branches. In regard to pruning he believed that the circumstances of location and culture should be taken into account. As to time it may be done any time after the leaves fall, and before the starting of the sap in spring. One point is of great importance: do not prune severely at any other time—do it lightly and often. As a general thing we prune too much. In transplanting, he believed the tap root should be severed, as where this is done, new roots and rootlets are put out, and the tree not only receives support but is better fitted to withstand subsequent transplantings, if necessary. Animal manure forms the best fertilizer for orchards; wood ashes are also excellent. As a general principle he would advise to grow an orchard from the seed, and have the trees grow where they are to stand in the orchard. He believed in home nurseries—and yet thought many of the trees in the small nurseries of our state were "not worth a snap," and their dissemination would tend to bring disrepute upon Maine trees. He had a very poor opinion of crab apples, and would not recommend their culture; they are hardy it is true, but are not profitable. He would, instead of crabs, set a good tree of any other hardy variety. Old orchards, by pruning, mulching and care, could be renovated so as to be profitable for many years, and he would recommend it to be done in all cases where the trees were not too far gone. In conclusion, he said fruit growing as a specialty in this State could be made a successful business; and even the pear could be grown in any part of Maine or Washington county if varieties were obtained adapted to the locality, and they were given intelligent care.

A brief discussion followed in which Mr. Beaumer of Meddybemps, said at his place he could ripen the Concord grape three years out of four, and could ripen the Clinton every season; the latter never failed.
